The faculty members honored with the Courage to Teach designation are faculty committed to the humanistic teaching of the medical school curriculum. They love to teach and they enjoy working with emerging physicians.

Can you identify the Courage to Teach faculty member from the description on the following slides?
Being a teacher comes naturally to this faculty member, as a family of teachers surrounded him while he was growing up.

He looks at the medical students he teaches as “stars” and he hopes through teaching anatomy, he is making a difference in their lives.

He finds strength through his family and the adoption of his two daughters from China, which have helped to define his purpose in life.

He found the love of his life at a Beggars Banquet (at Michigan State University).

Keep reading to find out who has the “Courage to Teach”...
He finds the environment here at the Ohio State University College of Medicine full of opportunities. “You look great when you work with the best!”

He loves visiting museums, playing golf and history and going places with his daughters, especially the zoo.

He has been honored with teaching awards from both the Ohio State University College of Medicine and the College of Dentistry.

Keep reading to find out who has the “Courage to Teach”...